SUNY Geneseo
Dean of the School of Business
Geneseo, New York

The State University of New York College at Geneseo, one of the nation's top public undergraduate colleges, seeks a Dean of its School of Business. This is an exciting opportunity to lead a student-centered business school at a critical juncture in its history. The School of Business will play a major role in the College's efforts to increase outreach and development activities as it relies increasingly on private funding. The next Dean will build on momentum already established by the College to advance the School's niche as a provider of a first-rate business education anchored in the liberal arts.

With the School having successfully secured AACSB re-accreditation in 2012, the Dean will have an opportunity to develop an ambitious plan to significantly advance the standing of an institution with a reputation for preparing top-quality students for the workplace and graduate school. The Dean's long-term strategy will address issues such as the development of a renewed and strengthened faculty, the management of high student demand for classes in the School, increased engagement with the business community and alumni, and development of resources.

Geneseo seeks a dean who will be a strong internal advocate for the school and a partner with the administration in outreach efforts to alumni, donors, and the business community. The Dean will be a presence on a campus that values close connections among students, faculty and administration. S/he will work to recruit and develop new faculty while leading a veteran faculty group with a reputation for working well together and collaborating with faculty in other disciplines in the liberal arts tradition.

Founded in 1871 as a teacher training college, Geneseo has developed into the most selective undergraduate institution in the SUNY system and is nationally recognized as a center of excellence in undergraduate education. It is a public liberal arts college with selected professional and master's level programs that combines a rigorous curriculum, transformational learning experiences and a rich co-curricular life to create a learning-centered environment. The entire college community works together to develop socially responsible citizens with skills and values important to the pursuit of an enriched life and success in the world. A long-standing member of the Council of Public Liberal Arts Colleges, Geneseo embraces its public mission and works to advance the quality and recognition of the public liberal arts sector of higher education.
