Letter from The Department of Student Life

Congratulations on serving as a student organization advisor at SUNY Geneseo. Your active involvement will contribute to student learning, student involvement, and the success of the student organization. Advising a student organization is a challenging and rewarding experience. Through regular contact with the organization you can keep informed about the activities of the group and you can advise the officers of the organization on the appropriateness and general value of their operations and activities. While every advisor perceives their relationship with the student organization differently, every advisor should be accessible and should provide whatever counsel the group and its members need.

This manual will provide you with information about being an advisor as well as important resources. “The Student Learning Imperative (American College Personnel Association, 1994) proposes that faculty and educational leaders in higher education, including organization advisers, need to develop conditions that motivate and inspire students to devote more time and energy to educationally purposeful activities both in and outside the classroom. Advisors who work with student organization can help achieve this objective” (Dunkel & Schuh, 1998). In addition, there is information related to liability and risk reduction so you can prepare for discussions with your organizations.

As an advisor to a student organization, you have the opportunity to extend, influence and develop student learning that happens out-of-the-classroom. The Department of Student Life appreciates your commitment and dedication to enhancing student life at SUNY Geneseo. Students will grow and develop as you fulfill the vital role as an advisor.

Please know that The Department of Student Life is always here to assist you if you should have any questions or concerns. The main office is located in the MacVittie College Union, room 321, or can be reached at 585-245-5851.

The Role of the College Union

The college union advances a sense of community, unifying the institution by embracing the diversity of students, faculty, staff, alumni, and guests. We bolster the educational mission of the institution and the development of students as lifelong learners by delivering an array of cultural, educational, social, and recreational programs, services, and facilities.

By any form or name, we serve as the heart of the campus community and create a welcoming environment by:

- Operating as a student-centered organization that engages in shared decision making and holistic development through employment and involvement.
- Advocating for inclusivity and equity, fostering respect, and affirming the identities of all individuals.
- Educating students in leadership and social responsibility and offering firsthand experiences in global citizenship.
- Providing gathering spaces to encourage formal and informal community interactions that build meaningful relationships.

Traditionally considered the living room, the college union enhances the student experience and cultivates an enduring connection to the institution.

Student Organization Definition

A college registered student organization at SUNY Geneseo is:

- 1.) any student-driven group whose primary membership and entire leadership consists of students currently enrolled at SUNY Geneseo and who are paying the mandatory student activity fee
- 2.) formed in order to contribute to the students' personal development and the advancement of the College Mission
- 3.) non-credit bearing
- 4.) officially registered with the College through the Department of Student Life, as the Vice President of Student and Campus Life designee

The policies and procedures of SUNY Geneseo supersede any outside affiliation or inter/national entity for all organizations that have affiliations outside of Geneseo.

Registration does not imply college endorsement of the positions and views of any organization. Rather, it implies that the institution accepts the organization’s mission as educationally valid and that the organization has complied with institutional registration and continuing registration procedures. For this reason, student organizations are prohibited from taking “Geneseo” in front of the organization name. Instead, student organizations are permitted to place “Geneseo” at the end of the name. For example, “Piano Club at Geneseo” or “Piano Club of Geneseo” are acceptable formats.

Registration with the College does not permit the organization to act in the name of the university, to represent the university, engage in any contractual obligation in the name of the university, nor represent the organization as being an official part of the university.

Student groups that are formed and sponsored by academic and administrative departments, in the pursuit of research, administrative activities and academic endeavors, are not considered college registered student organization. The sponsoring academic or administrative department assumes responsibility for the group and therefore can reserve space for the group under the department's name.

Criteria for Obtaining College Registration

To ensure the educational integrity of co-curricular activities on campus, the College has developed Student Organization College Registration Procedures. Please note that Student Association funding is entirely separate from College registration. College registration allows an organization to conduct business on and off campus, using SUNY Geneseo's name, services, equipment, and facilities.

Registration with the College does not permit the organization to act in the name of the university, to represent the university, engage in any contractual obligation in the name of the university, nor represent the organization as being an official part of the university.

Registration does not imply College endorsement of the positions and views of any organization. Rather, it implies that the institution accepts the organization's mission as educationally valid, and that the organization has complied with institutional registration and continuing registration procedures.

Student Involvement Mentors

Student Involvement Mentors assist students in finding ways to enhance the student experience through involvement in a student organization. Students can schedule a meeting with a SIM to connect his or her passions and interests to one or more of the many Geneseo student organizations! Additionally, Student Involvement Mentors offer a variety of services to new and existing student organizations. SIMs can assist with event planning, fundraising, publicity, reservations and policy clarification. Feel free to share their email (studentorgs@geneseo.edu) with any students who are struggling to find ways to get involved! You can also visit https://www.geneseo.edu/student\_involvement\_mentor for more information!

What is an advisor?

SUNY Geneseo requires all College registered student organizations to have a faculty or staff advisor. Emeriti are considered acceptable advisors. Student organizations are required to have an advisor to maintain College registration. It is the responsibility of the organization to find an advisor.

An advisor serves as a resource, consultant and mentor for student organizations, as well as aid in the development and growth of the student organizations and its members. They will maintain regular contact with their organizations. The advisor accepts responsibility for serving as an educator, staying informed about the activities of the organization, advising organization officers and members on College policies and procedures and modeling ethical leadership.

The advisor role is a voluntary commitment; therefore, each individual advisor must decide the amount of time and energy they can devote to the organization. The advisor should let the organization know how much time they are able to commit. It is also important that the organization officers share their own expectations and limits. It is up to the particular advisor and the respective organization to decide the best way to make their relationships productive, successful and fulfilling.

An individual should not accept the invitation to serve in the important role of advisor unless he or she is capable of fulfilling the expectations.

Organizations seeking advice on advisor selection may consult the Senior Coordinator of Student Programs. Student organization officers will nominate a faculty/staff member to serve as their advisor, however, a department may suggest possible advisors.

Benefits and Rewards

Advisor Roles and Responsibilities

An advisor's role and responsibility varies depending on the needs, challenges and expectations of the group. Some organizations need more guidance and direction than others. While our hope is that the advisor maintains some regular contact with the organization and provides assistance when needed, the amount of participation on part of the advisor can vary. Some advisors play an active role in the organization and can commit to attending weekly meetings, assist in programmatic needs, and support the student officers. Others may maintain a more distant relationship especially for organizations that are very self-sufficient. At the end of the day, it all depends on the group. It is important to remember that advisors are responsible for fostering a relationship with the group, not for the organizations actions. Additionally, regardless of the role in which one serves, the advisor should understand the purpose and mission of the organization.

Roles

Below you will find a few different roles an advisor can perform while serving their term. We recommend taking time to familiarize oneself with each role and how to perform each role. This will aid in your effectiveness with the group. Remember, these roles will vary depending on the group!

Mentor: A mentor is someone who creates a “one-on-one” learning relationship with the groups’ officers and member. This relationship can cultivate leadership development This person models the way and leads by example. In the role as mentor, an advisor could be sought out for professional, personal or organization advice.

It is not uncommon for club officers and members to confide in an organization’s advisor for personal reasons. In this way, an advisor should be authentic, genuine and a good listener. It’s important to have any understanding of the definition of personal development amongst students and be able to challenge them intellectually and emotionally while supporting them. Communication is key!

If a group member is interested in your field of student, the student may reach out to you for professional advice. In this capacity, an advisor should be familiar with the students’ interests and academic background as well as a willingness to connect students to a network of professionals. Mentors will provide detailed feedback and support

Team Builder: As a team builder, the advisor has the responsibility of facilitating and guiding the process of turning a group of individuals into a team. In other words, assist members in formulating relationships amongst one another and with the advisor. This facilitation is intentional, genuine and active. Positive relationships help the organization succeed and work through conflicts. In order to successful serve as a team builder, it’s imperative to familiarize oneself with the group’s strengths, weaknesses, work styles, and member contributions. Encourage leaders to use open communication and understanding to engage members in a variety of ways on committees or task forces. An advisor can absolutely help facilitate the process of developing these relationships through a workshop or retreat.

Motivator: Serving as a motivator for a student organization may be one of the most important roles as an advisor. For students, motivation can take any shape. Motivation can either be intrinsic or extrinsic. Intrinsic motivations include desire, value, or approval. Examples of extrinsic motivations include recognition and achievement. As an advisor, you should possess an understanding of what motivates the members and affirm and recognize their hard work and efforts. Additionally, motivate your members to develop and implement meaningful and intentional programs.

Mediator: Problems will undoubtedly arise in an organization and it may become necessary as an advisor to mediate. Be sure to provide a safe space for members to work through their conflicts and issues in an open and respectful manner with each other. Remind the members that they want what's best for the organization. It is also recommended that you facilitate discussions on how they can work together to continue to succeed and live out their mission. There is also a possibility that one student may be causing problems within the group. It may be necessary to speak with the student individually.

Reflective Agent: An advisor serving as a reflective agent guides students in their reflection on actions including how, what and why. Advisors can encourage reflection about how they're performing, strengths, weaknesses, successes and failures. Be sure to give students the opportunity to discuss how they can improve in their areas of improvement by creating a space for reflection. Remember, feedback is key. In doing so, be sure that all criticisms are intentional and constructive.

Educator: As an educator, the advisor will be a role model of behavior, encouraging reflection and fielding any questions. Educators understand the importance of student organizations to the college experience and the significant learning that happens in a student organization. One of the biggest roles in being an educator is allowing them to make their own decisions and either succeed or fail. In other words, learn to do nothing. This can be difficult when the natural instinct is to intervene. Be there to assist and guide students. Failures offer an opportunity for reflection.

Policy Interpreter: A policy interpreter refers to an advisor who is familiar with the policies, procedures and resources. Members will look to you for information and clarification. Knowing this information will make you a better advisor.

Responsibilities and Expectations

Advisors play a vital role in making the student organization experience meaningful for the officers and members. The most successful organizations are those in which the advisor takes an active interest in the group. Advisors to student organizations should offer constructive criticism and guidance, while allowing the students to develop their own goals, rules and methods of accountability.

Advisor responsibilities include but are not limited to:

1. Promote the College values of learning, creativity, inclusivity, civic responsibility and sustainability
2. Serve as positive and ethical role models
3. Serve as a resource and guide to the organization
4. Attend some meetings of the organization and their executive board. Advisors should also try to attend a few club programs or activities to show their support for the organization.
5. Maintain an awareness of the activities and programs sponsored by the organization
6. Take an active role in helping students plan and execute a meaningful program that is consistent with the organization's purposes and in line with the goals and objectives of the College
7. Motivate the organization to develop leadership skills, professionalism, and personal growth
8. Provide support, direction, feedback, and praise to the organization

9. Notify College administrators of any unacceptable behavior, violations, or noncompliance on behalf of the organization
10. Articulate campus policies and procedures and assist the organization in understanding these policies
11. Provide guidance regarding financial transactions, help maintain accurate financial records, and help organization submit Student Association budgets, if applicable
12. Provide consistency and continuity during leadership transitions from year to year
13. Communicate to new members the goals and procedures of the organization so that all members understand why the organization exists, why it was started, and who is responsible for doing the various jobs
14. Provide signature and oversight to the continuing registration process
15. All student organization advisors are considered “Campus Security Authorities” (mandated reporters). A “Campus Security Authority” is a college official who has significant responsibility for student and campus activities. The Student Right to Know and Campus Security Act of 1990 (Clery Act), requires colleges that receive federal financial aid to report the occurrence of certain criminal offenses that are reported to local police agencies or any official of the college who is defined as a “Campus Security Authority” (mandated reporter). Criminal offenses required to be reported are: murder and non-negligent manslaughter, negligent manslaughter, sex offenses broken down by forcible sex offenses (includes rape) and non-forcible sex offenses (incest and statutory rape), robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, motor vehicle theft, arson, arrests for liquor, weapon and drug violations, date of the incident. As “Campus Security Authority” (mandated reporter), the advisor must report the details of the incident; what, where and when the incident occurred; who was involved is helpful but not mandatory; and the location of the incident to University Police and/or the Dean of Students.

Advising Styles

Advising styles describe the ways in which you advise when you work with someone. Advising styles adapt to match the development needs of the individual or organization you advise. Focusing on influencing the performance of others, advising styles reflect how you conduct yourself. Advising styles can change over the course of the semester as a result of growth and development of the group.

Situational Leadership Theory

Developed by Paul Hersey and Ken Blanchard, situational leadership theory explains in detail different ways in which advisors communicate with leaders in a student organization. These advising styles are based upon the group's preparedness and relationship. Rated high or low directive (task) and high or low on supportive (relationship). Many times, advisors may struggle with students because they believe that they need a higher level of interaction or direction. A group may be more task-oriented or more relationship-oriented. Regardless, be sure to reflect upon your advising style and determine whether it's filling the needs of the group and providing the members and leaders the opportunity to grow.

Telling (Directing): High task, low relationship

The advisor provides specific instructions and direction, and manages task completion. It is recommended to use this style with students that are at a low level of preparedness and need help understanding the basic institution policies (curriculum, academic probation, etc.).

Selling (Coaching): High relationship, high task

The advisor continues to direct and closely supervise task accomplishments but also explains decisions, solicits suggestions, and supports progress. Use this style with students when commitment is needed but the decision is not open to student influence.

Participating (Supporting): High relationship, low task

The advisor facilitates and supports the efforts toward task accomplishments and shares responsibilities for decision making with the student. Use this style with students that are just starting to understand the concepts that will lead to success.

Delegating: Low relationship, low task

The advisor empowers the students to conduct their own decision-making, problem solving, and delegating. Use this style with students that are at a high level of preparedness.

Stages of Group Development

Bruce Tuckman developed four cyclical stages of group development-forming, storming, norming and performing. These stages are interconnected and that all groups go through these stages of development continually throughout their process of developing on campus.

Stage One: Forming

Behaviors:

- ❖ Purpose and goal are unclear

- ❖ Members feel varying degrees of commitment
- ❖ Members are cautious with initiating
- ❖ Members Avoid Responsibility
- ❖ Communication is low and a couple members usually dominate

Tasks

- ❖ Build a common purpose and clear expectations
- ❖ Clarify accountability, recognition, and rewards
- ❖ Assess resources, see who can contribute what
- ❖ Find a leader and advisor to provide direction

Stage Two: Storming

Behaviors:

- ❖ Differences and confusion arise over goals and roles
- ❖ Struggles erupt over approaches, direction and who is in control
- ❖ Team members reach toward leadership with counterproductive behaviors
- ❖ Team is uncertain how to deal with communication and solve conflict

Tasks

- ❖ Involve everyone in discussions
- ❖ Include all areas and opinions
- ❖ Seek further clarity about purpose and develop a common approach to meeting objectives

Behaviors:

- ❖ Team gains confidence and momentum
- ❖ What, how, who, when has been clarified

- ❖ Team builds relationships with each other and external people and groups

Tasks:

- ❖ Develop processes for information sharing and feedback
- ❖ Have open forums on tasks and relationships
- ❖ Build appropriate feedback loops

Stage Four: Performing

Behaviors:

Tasks:

- ❖ Continuously seek to improve

- ❖ Continuously try out new and better methods

These stages are cyclical and can restart whenever there is a leadership change, new members or introduction of a new program idea.

Tips for Effective Advising

A. Most Groups Prefer an Active Advisor:

Being active does not mean serving as the leader, but rather it means getting involved with the group. Such involvement usually includes attending meetings and activities, assessing the group's progress, and being available to discuss ideas and problems. An advisor may also establish personal time with individual officers and members to discuss organizational and personal concerns.

B. Be a Good Resource:

You should be familiar with the policies and procedures of the organization and the institution before trying to advise the group. Regardless of how great the program may be, it may not be successful if such details as room reservations, contracts, or fundraising requests have not been completed. You may refer to the Student Organization Handbook to find more information regarding program planning. The Department of Student Life staff would also be happy to answer any of your questions.

C. Help the Group Set Appropriate Goals:

It is hard to measure success if the organization does not have goals. It is beneficial for the advisor to make recommendations based upon the stated purpose of the group and the organizations previous objectives. Break each goal down into doable steps. A time line for completion should be created for each established goal.

D. Support the Group Enthusiastically:

It is essential that this enthusiasm result from a sincere belief in the group and its goals.

E. Do Not Be Afraid to Admit A Lack of Information:

It is far better to say "I do not know the answer to that, but I will find out and get back to you" than to give misinformation.

F. The Advisor Should not 'Bail Out' the Organization:

A group that fails and learns from that failure acquires the potential to evolve into a stronger and more productive group. The advisor could offer solutions to problems but let the group decide what to do. It is better for an organization to learn from there past mistakes than succeeds only to become dependent on the advisor.

G. Never Underestimate the Importance of Positive Reinforcement:

Sincere praise and encouragement of positive outcomes can increase the likelihood that they will reoccur. Positive reinforcement is a powerful tool for advisors.
