

Michelle English Director of Operations, J&J Editorial

"I sharpened my critical thinking skills in my philosophy classes, and I'd say that being able to have reasoned discussions with others is critical to my current job when making decisions for my business. With Philosophy, I learned to be able to confidently analyze, decide, and discuss the issues at hand, while still having the humility to hear others' perspectives and accept when my views were flawed. Philosophy's rigorous coursework puts emphasis on a lot of individual reading and written assignments - I think that pairs well with my chosen career path as both a leader and executive."
