

Marianne Erhardt
Assistant Teaching Professor of Writing
Wake Forest University

"Philosophy taught me self-awareness and precision of language. I practiced skills of argumentation, intertextual analysis, and a range of writing, from exploratory to formal. The major re-framed my quest for wisdom into lifelong curiosity. It has helped me be more honest, daring, and purposeful in creative work. It has made me a more inquisitive and compassionate professor, citizen, parent, and friend. The professors were extraordinary, especially Ted Everett, Bill Edgar, and Stacey Edgar."

Class of 2003
PHIL Major
MFA in Creative Writing
Univ of Wisconsin-Madison