

Steve Guglielmo
Assistant Professor of Psychology
Macalester College

"I study the psychology of morality and moral judgment. Although my research adopts primarily a psychological lens of analysis, my background in philosophy has been invaluable in providing a rich, interdisciplinary, and normatively-informed analysis of moral behavior. The nature of the course material reinforced my passion for rigorous, logical analysis and my awareness that philosophy not only sharpens our conceptual understanding but also informs our understanding of practical, pressing issues."

Class of 2005
PHIL Minor
PhD in Psychology
Brown University