161A • Technology in 1800s Compared to Today

Erica Bervy

Faculty Sponsor: Ann Marie Lauricella, School of Education

This poster presentation explores how everyday tasks have been made easier with the use of technology. Specifically, this unit uses artifacts from the Livingston County Museum (i.e. washer and bath basin), to show how technology has advanced over time and altered helped make everyday life. Students will investigate and evaluate the ideas they have learned about how people did certain everyday tasks in the 1800s and compare them to how things are done today. This in-depth investigation will provide an opportunity to consider the evolution of chores and their impact on everyday life. Do kids have it easier today? Has technology made us cleaner? Has technology made our jobs easier? Do we work less? Using historical artifacts helped to design questions surrounding quality of life relating to the impact of technology.

The Great Depression: Causes, Severity, Length and Lessons

Rufus Burgess

Faculty Sponsor: Christopher Annala, Economics

The Great Depression marks a pivotal time in modern history and economic thought. What caused the Great Depression? Why was it different from previous depressions? Depressions existed before the 1930's and yet none had such drastic effects on income and employment for such a long period of time. Why was the Great Depression international in scope? What caused nearly the entire industrialized world to fall into depression? Most importantly: What can policy makers learn from the Great Depression and how can they apply their education to modern economic phenomena?
